

Quotation#10

“The superego is no longer what it used to be! Now, it’s to each their own delight [volupté]. And also: to each their own truth. And what’s more: the market for all. Everyone has a right to their own little beliefs, their whims, as long as they don’t bother others, whereas the truth is precisely what’s worth bothering others about. Lacan was no stranger to this.”

J.-A. Miller, “he said, I’m still 5 years old”, Libération, 2001.

